Growing in Humility by Gaining Indulgences

If the essence of humility is thinking more about God and others than about oneself, growing in humility means training ourselves to do just that, which is a life-long project.

- Prayer is essential here, by turning our attention towards God.
- Reading the Bible is essential as well, because it presents us with Christ's perfect example of humility.

Another simple and practical way to exercise humility is praying for the souls in Purgatory.

- Most of us die without having been completely purified from our self-centered habits and desires.
- If we die in friendship with Christ, we will enter eternal life with him in heaven, but we can't make that entry until the last remnants of self-centeredness have been purified.
- Purgatory is the name the Church gives to that process of purification.

The Church has also taught us that we can pray for the souls in Purgatory, and we can even help speed up their purification.

An indulgence is the name the Church gives to this speeding up of the purification process in Purgatory. We can gain small indulgences for the souls in Purgatory, relieving their suffering and speeding up their entry into heaven by following all actions of the church that are linked to indulgences.

Humility does not mean you think less of yourself

Like a good mother, the Church has made it easy for us to help our brothers and sisters in Purgatory. And whenever we do, we are opening our hearts to God and to others, thereby exercising the pivotal virtue of humility, the key to holiness and happiness.

This week, let's give God the pleasure of doing our part to grow in his favorite thing, humility. (Source: E-priest.com)
